

PSRA Inaugural Conference

The Property Services Regulatory Authority (PSRA) will hold its inaugural conference “Property Services, Facing the Future” on Wednesday the 6th of March 2019 at the Croke Park Meetings and Events Centre, Dublin 3. The conference will be open to 350 licensed delegates. The running times for the event will be 9am – 4pm.

The conference will focus on key issues relevant to the sector and the PSRA and we are delighted to announce that Richard Curran will be MC at our event.

A central aspect of the conference will be the mid-morning session entitled “Impact of Regulation: A National and European Perspective”. This session will focus on a report currently being prepared by Dr Róisín Murphy, for the PSRA based on information obtained from the survey of licensees carried out over the course of the summer and Mr. Luc Machon, President of European Association of Real Estate Professions (CEPI) who will provide an overview of regulation of the sector from a European perspective. There will also be a panel discussion and Q&A session around this segment.

For those unable to attend the conference, a live stream facility will be available allowing licensees to watch the conference from around the country. The mobile app, Slido will also be available to both attendees and those watching the conference, giving all licensees the opportunity to pose questions through this electronic platform.

Invitations to this inaugural event will issue in January. Due to limited availability, the conference is open to one licensed representative from each licensed business.
